

Charles William Halderman and The Astoria Golf and Country Club

By Evelyn Hankel

THE ASTORIA GOLF and Country Club was a dream and plan in the heart of Astoria Counsellor, Charles W. Halderman which became a reality for him and his friends in 1924. The previous year in June 1923, Halderman and his friends A. C. Fulton and J. F. Roman spread the word of an initial warm-up meeting that "set the ball rolling."

Founder & First President

Halderman, a prominent and well-known Astoria attorney, was born April 17, 1881 in Pawnee County, Nebraska, the son of William J. and Ida Fulton Halderman. He attended the University of Kansas and came to Astoria in August, 1900 where he worked for a time as book-keeper for lumber mills and canneries in this area. From 1903 to 1910 he served as private secretary to his uncle, U. S. Senator C. W. Fulton in Washington, D.C. He returned to Astoria and operated the Astoria Fuel and Supply Company for many years.

Charlie Halderman studied law under another uncle, G. C. Fulton, and passed the Bar in 1918, but did not go into private practice until 1933. From 1921 to 1933 he was Postmaster of Astoria, and was instrumental in the building of the new post office building (1933).

On June 30, 1906, Charles Halderman and Bertha Hobson, daughter of pioneer John Hobson, were married in Astoria. A son, John and a daughter, Marjorie were born to them in Astoria. John is a research lawyer in Durham, North

Through the years in Astoria, Charles Halderman held many civic positions, to name a few: He spearheaded and held position as head of the Regatta Association for many years. He was always interested in school affairs and was a member of the Astoria School Board a number of times. Halderman was a member of the Republican Central Committee and with G. C. Fulton, bought the land and organized the Astoria Golf and Country Club, serving as the first President for fourteen years.

1923 Organizing Meeting

On June 1, 1923, all interested Astorians met in the Clatsop County Courthouse for the first planning session for an Astoria Golf Club and Links. 75 men from a list of 110 prospective members were present that evening.

Officers and Trustees were selected as follows:

Trustees: G. C. Fulton, J. E. Roman, W. Sanborn, C. W. Halderman, G. W. Utzinger, R. R. Bartlett, Morton Nelson, E. M. Cherry and Roger Pinneo.

Charles Halderman was unanimously elected President and Grover Utzinger, Secretary.

President Halderman appointed three Committee Chairmen:

By-Laws: F. C. Hesse, G. C. Fulton and E. M. Cherry

Finance: J. E. Roman, G. W. Utzinger and M. Sweet

Planning: R. R. Bartlett, who later consulted with R. C. Ashbury, a past Astorian, now of Portland, who had laid out a number of links in the Northwest.

Golf Links Site Selected

The site chosen for the golf links had been partly a cranberry bog and was listed as a partition of the incorporated town of Clatsop on Clatsop Plains in the County of Clatsop. Clatsop was a town for a short time, having been approved by the Oregon Senate on October 29, 1870.

As soon as the site was chosen, the plans for the Astoria Golf and Country Club blossomed. Charlie Halderman wrote to his friend, Nelson Troyer, president of the Astoria-Seattle Iron Works in Seattle. Mr. Troyer had been a founder of the Rainier Golf Club of Seattle, and the by-laws of that organization were the guide lines for the Astoria club.

Charter Members

As of July 7, 1923, 110 members were given certificates of membership. The list includes most of the well-known Astoria professional and business men of that era. Copies of early certificates are some of the memorabilia of the Club today. These are signed by President Charles W. Halderman and then-Secretary, Grover W. Utzinger, on May 28, 1923.

Of the original members, some of the sons and daughters and grandchildren living in the area, are recognized:

Opening Day

Within one year of the planning meeting the club opened to an enthusiastic group of 110 members ready to try the course. The Opening Day was June 18, 1924.

First Club house

The first clubhouse was more or less a one room affair. Jean Gearhart Sandoz remembers it as rather small, with a lunch counter on one side and later a number of additions which allowed for a small dining area and kitchen. The bar was added and a club-like atmosphere prevailed.

The first donation to the interior decoration of the Club House was a large mirror from the old steamer, T. J. Potter, which had been on the Portland-Astoria run for many years.

Present Club house

From 1924 to 1940, the membership expanded. The 1924 Club house building had been remodeled in 1947. With the demise of the first Club house which burned to the ground after a smoldering fire was discovered by the Club Manager early on Sunday morning, June 2, 1968, a second much larger building was set up which is the present day Astoria Golf and County Club house.

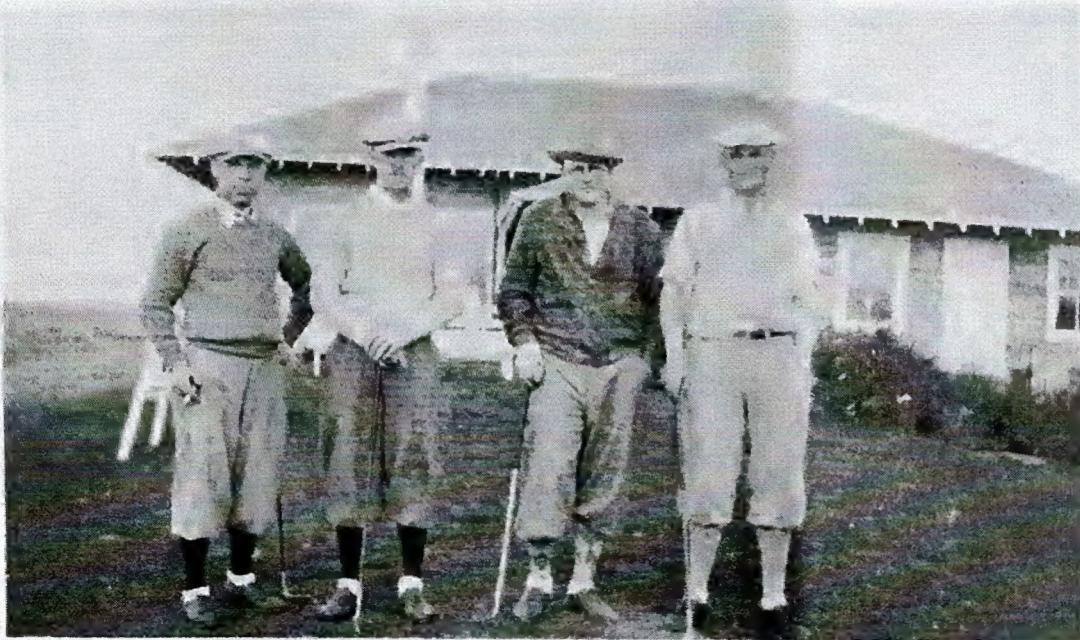

Women's Auxiliary

Through those early years Charles Halderman was re-elected as President, and the Women's Auxiliary was formed as the women became important members of the Club. Here they held their own tournaments, Bridge Club luncheons and Fashion Shows, drawing women from throughout the Northwest. Loyal and true members all the years up to the present time, which finds many daughters of the original Women's Auxiliary now as leading members.

Record Breaking Games

Those early years had a number of record breaking games and holes-in-one, and here are listed just a few of these titles:

The first hole-in-one was attributed to an officer at Fort Stevens.

Mrs. R. R. Bartlett, elected President of the Women's Auxiliary, and Mrs. Sherman (Ruby) Lovell won the Women's Championship golf title in 1928.

Mrs. Lucien (Beulah) Sasnett, elected President of the Women's Auxiliary in 1929 (mother to Barbara Sasnett Doyle). Beulah Sasnett became the new Golf Queen for 1929.

William C. Palmberg broke the Course record at the Club with 69 on August 11, 1929.

In 1930, we find Mrs. L. M. (Marie) Spaulding Auxiliary President. In 1931, Mel Smith, Golf Pro from Portland was instructor at the Club.

Charlie Halderman was honored with a Life Membership to the Astoria Golf and Country Club, in 1931.

In 1936, another record was established when Mrs. George Ostrum became the first woman to have a "hole-in-one" at the Club.

Myrtle Lawson was for many years the leading lady golfer at the Club, and held the Auxiliary Chairmanship for these years. Myrtle and her husband operated Lawson's Confectionery in Astoria.

The women members of The Club had many "Fun" gatherings and often celebrated Club anniversaries with costume parties, as shown in the photo.

Oregon Coast Tournament Champions, men and women, are recorded from 1910 to the present year, and listings kept at the club.

The 1988 Club officers are: President Don Cox, Vice President John Alexanian, Secretary Gary Hanson, Treasurer Ed Rippit, Board of Directors: Bob Canessa, Al Davis, Lee McHugh, Bob Mangold and Dave Palmberg.

Beloved historian, Dr. Jorma Leinassar, while Club Historian gathered much material in preparation for an extended history of the Club, which never materialized due to his untimely death. Club Manager, John Mattingly, kindly gave us the use of the material for this article.
